Strategy and Outlook

Market Overview

Global financial markets were subjected to a roller coaster ride in Q1 2016. From the start of the year through to mid-February global stock markets fell 10% to justify the category of "correction."

They then bounced back to end the quarter flat (MSCI World +0.3%, only the third time in history this has happened in the US in a quarter) as the European Central Bank increased its quantitative easing programme to €80bn a month from €60bn a month and US Fed chair Janet Yellen held fast on US interest rates. Meanwhile, China which had engaged in a devaluation of the yuan in January from CNY6.2 to CNY6 saw the currency stabilise in March.

Outlook

We remain rather cautious in the short term. There is a probability of volatility into mid-year as a number of hurdles need to be overcome. More time will be needed to assess the slowdown in China, further clarity in the Eurozone banking sector and more certainty surrounding the UK position in the EU is also important. Meanwhile the US is becoming a politically driven market as hostilities both within the Democrat and Republican parties and the market may become tricky ahead of the party conventions in July.

Performance and Activity

Fund Performance

The fund rose 6.5% for the quarter while year to date the fund is down 2.9%. ($)

Fund Activity

We took profits in Fresnillo and Rolls' shares following significant reratings in both. We added to our corporate bond positions via an increase in Blackstone GSO loan fund. Meanwhile we tilted the portfolios slightly more defensively given the current volatility in markets.

Yellen and China's relationship on rates-a faustian pact or a necessary evil to maintain global growth?

The issue of Janet Yellen's reluctance to raise interest rates at the Fed's 15/16 March meeting has been widely discussed, because by conventional yardsticks, any assessment of the US economy currently would argue it needs higher interest rates. GDP growth is steady, inflationary pressures are building and the economy is close to full employment, and yet, she doesn't move on rates, preferring to keep them at 0.5%.

Her decision led to a sharp fall in the US dollar, a drop in bond yields across the curve and a further rise in gold which ended March back at $1250 after its best start to any year since 1986.

While Ms Yellen may argue on orthodox economic grounds for keeping interest rates at zero, it is getting harder to defend and signs of strain in the banking system with banks' core net income under severe pressure.

There seems little doubt in our minds about her coded message - she would rather keep rates low to stop the US dollar appreciating and the Chinese devaluing their yuan.

With these factors in mind our investment strategy is driven by three core principles in the short to medium term - inflation protection, (as central banks continue to print money) quality of earnings growth and strong balance sheets.
